Judges for the Photography Show

Malcolm Fancher - Master Craftsman Photographer.
Resides in Indianapolis and is now retired.
His Story:

I bought my first camera in 1944, a folding Kodak costing $13.00 and paid for at $1.00 per week until paid for. That started my love of photography. In 1963 I began my professional career, studying with well known photographers from all over the United States as well as the professionals locally. In 1978 I purchased The J. Wilson studio in Southport and later resold it back to Joyce Wilson, started my M. Fancher Studio in Lawrence, doing High School Seniors, Weddings, Families and Children. Thru those years I entered Print Competitions and received my Master of Photography and Photographic Craftsmen degrees from the Professional Photographers of America. I have taught numerous photographic classes, judged many photographic competitions. I am a past president and Life Member of The Indianapolis Professional Photographers Guild, a Life member of The Professional Photographers of Indiana as well as a long standing member of the Professional Photographers of America. My passion today in in Landscape and Nature Photography.
